

www.foodauthority.nsw.gov.au/industry/shellfish/shellfish-cultivation-or-harvesting. If another system is being used the following formal records must be kept as a minimum:

At the time of the relay movement.

- the name of the harvest area or location from which the shellfish was relayed, and
- the date and time at which the shellfish was relayed from the harvest area, and
- the name of the harvest area to which the shellfish was relayed, and
- the date and time at which the shellfish was relayed to the harvest area, and
- the species of shellfish relayed and the quantity of each species relayed, and
- the location of the shellfish within the harvest area that the shellfish were relayed to.

Movement record exemption for spat

All relay movements of shellstock intended to be sold for human consumption must be recorded. Movement of shellstock that is classed as spat does not need to be recorded if it will be on-grown at its destination for at least 60 days.

Further information

The procedures outlined in this document only relate to ASQAP requirements for the relay of shellstock. Further information relating to oyster movements is available from NSW Department of Primary Industries Oyster Industry Sustainable Aquaculture Strategy.